Given the many options available in the market, this application can help you find the right NVR device based on the specifications that you desire. It is an easy-to-use program that is suited to be installed on any Windows PC, which means that the overall system performance is not affected. Key Features: In case the NVR system you are about to install is the first one in the area, then you should know that it is not possible to use it with the first version of Windows. If you experience that problem, then you may consider purchasing the latest version of the operating system in order to make the application work as intended. The operating system for which this application is designed for is Windows Vista or later. It does not work with Windows XP. The application has a downloadable NVR Selector installed file that you should run in order to function. It allows you to search for devices that feature a specific number of HDD bays, a particular input resolution, more than one buffer, and frame rate. The NVR Selector is freeware and does not have any hidden costs. Is there a trial version available? Yes, there is. However, the trial version is only available for the download. System Requirements: A minimum of Windows Vista is required to run the application. The device that you are about to install the NVR Selector on must be compatible with the operating system. How to install it? In order to install the application, simply access its folder on your system, and double-click the executable file. It should be noted that the file is placed in the folder that is labeled 'uninstall'. The executable file should be run in order to provide you with the NVR Selector, following which you can start your search. You may also check out our reviews of the available NVR Selectors. It is time for a change The DVR-based surveillance camera market is poised for an upcoming transformation. This is evident from the fact that different solutions that are currently available in the market are bound to be replaced by the next generation of digital video recorders in the nearest future. It is worth noting that the trend of change may not only be limited to the surveillance cameras, but all the devices that include these recording devices. This eventually means that the market is awaiting for quality applications to offer a better market experience. In contrast to its
