Simple, fast, intuitive wallpaper changer for Windows. *Release notes: As of version 2.1: – All old bugs have been fixed. – There is no longer any need to click on the on/off button. The animation will now continue in the background if the PC is put to sleep. – The file named "desktop_backgrounds.xml" have been removed from the archive. Instead you now have the files "defaults.xml" and "custom_settings.xml" in the archive (the latter is used by the program when you start it for the first time). – The file "desktop_backgrounds.xml" now holds only a list of the images that will be downloaded if you select the "Custom Images" option. This should save a lot of memory and make the program run faster. – You can now choose between a single image and a folder of images. – The setting for "images" has been moved from the configuration section to the "Preview" section. *Changes from the previous version: – A launcher icon has been created on the desktop. – The graphic interface has changed, but it will still look familiar to the majority of users. – The program has been designed with a modern minimalist aesthetic in mind and with a minimalistic layout. – The program has been optimized for an advanced user experience, a low memory usage and stability. Effect of ageing on the immunological profile of human T lymphocytes. The effect of ageing on immunocompetent T cells was examined to determine the role that these cells may play in enhancing susceptibility to some infectious agents and cancers. Previous reports indicate that the age-associated decline of T cell function is due to changes in distribution of T cell subsets (Larsen et al. 1993). It was also shown that naive T cells are more resistant to activation than memory T cells. On the other hand, TCR-mediated activation of both memory and naive T cells leads to changes in the costimulatory activity between CD28 and CTLA-4 molecules. In this work, we have further investigated if there is any age-related change in other immunological parameters of T cells. Our results show that the surface expression of the adhesion molecules CD2 and CD44 is decreased in older than younger individuals, which may reflect changes in T cell homing to some anatomical sites. Immune response following TCR-mediated stimulation was also evaluated as a marker for age 09e8f5149f
